

Season 24/25 - Newsletter 7

More Banker misery, as Forest sprung a surprise at Anfield and we lost 490.46 points, points were also lost on the Brighton/Ipswich game as well. To put the 490 point lose into perspective, the record points scored so far across a game are 665.31, when City won 3-1 at West Ham a couple of weeks back, a swing of a thousand point gap between the two!!!

The top three remain the same.

All struggled for points this round.

Bachman & Robin and I Did Warne You made up ground on the top, a bit further down there were big moves for KaneAndDisable and Chips & Gravy.

McGinn & Tonic had a good round.

A Villa come back against Everton helped to boost the numbers, and salvage a banker. Although again all top 3 suffered with banking this weekend.

A couple of correct scores also helped.

Chips & Gravy's 11 place climb up the table was helped by their score this round.

SpursCollectables started with 36 points when United got their 3rd, two wrong bankers tempered the rest of the scoring.

As always, all the points for the round can be found in the Archives..

The Picks had some big points being won, with Man Utd 4 The Win top scoring.

Kanu Feel It rose 7 places, and finished second this round, marginally ahead of Borussia Munchingflapjack in 3rd, who climbed up 12 places this round.

Kanu Feel It	343.81
Borussia Munchingflapjack	343.16
Hoggy's Heroes	336.36
Von's Gamble	333.34

There's lots of points on offer in midweek. Carabao and Champions League games take place, and a number of league games across a variety of leagues from Monday through to the Deadline for Round 7 on Friday night

In the table, Bachman & Robin have stayed on top with the two behind them also holding onto their places this round.

The points are so close, I still expect to see big gains and losses, every round, for teams, as I expect matters to take a while to settle.

I'm going to focus my next update on the Players, as the end of September will see the First Transfer window open, for anyone wanting to use it. Super Maresca, Kanu Feel It and Borussia Munchingflapjack are currently heading the player's picks. There's a table on the All The Tables page, on the website, amongst others.

So I've decided to put a slightly bigger focus on the Grand Prix Trophy. The website page for the GPT shows the scores for this round, and the order we end up in, most importantly the top 10 who get the points in the competition. Then there's the table, which totals all the points won so far, with positions decided by points, and if even, by the number of times the team has been in the top 10. Changes in positions this round are also shown.

Then, just in case you're interested, when you've finished in the top 10 each round, it's also recorded.

AND

Points ignore any additional points you win because of bankers, and any penalty points for getting scores wrong. Just PURE points used to decide the top ten in this competition.

We're into Round 7 of 26, and McGinn & Tonic took top spot on the podium this time round. GPT virgins Chips & Gravy and Hoggy's Heroes took 2nd and 3rd spots to get on the scoresheet.

Tumbledwyer lead the way with two first place finishes, and a 4th, so far.

Onto Round 7, and Premier League again, with the Women's Super League also getting underway, providing us with the chance to predict a City/Arsenal double for Sunday.

The Deadline for RD7 is Friday at 9PM. That's 9PM UK time... Friday, the 20th, 21:00, UK Time.

Friday.

I will chase you, possibly more than once.... You know I will
