

Season 24/25 - Newsletter 10

Quite a weekend. Cole Palmer scored the second fastest 4 goals by a single player in the Premiership, all in one half. Anyone know who's got the fastest 4.....

Bruno saw Red, probably unworthy, and led to a lot of VAR discussion, and the wrong use of it. Interestingly, this weekend last year Spurs beat Liverpool 2-1, when there was a lot of fuss about VAR then. The replay for that game must be coming up soon. One great stat from Sunday's game, SPurs have a greater XG at Old Trafford this season in the Premier League than United!!!! (and along with Liverpool have scored more goals there!!!!)

In the table, Tumbledwyer started the weekend with a 13 point lead, and stay the same amount ahead.

It's Addicks Fan that have moved up 8 places into second this time, making the biggest impact at the top, and keeping the 13 point gap top top spot.

The Grooneys were the only other 'climbers' near the top.

No Guaranteed Bankers in sight at the top.

Shout out to SpursCollectables, finishing top this round in the Scores, The Picks and The Grand Prix, the first time that's been done.

Only one correct banker score this round, McGinn & Tonic enhanced the Brentford/West Ham draw.

Addicks move up the table was helped by their second place, and Hazard's Arse were assisted by a Guaranteed Margin Win by Spurs away at United, and 19.81 points!!!

The average score this round was 21.29, the worst score in Round 9 was -5.28... I won't say who

As mentioned, SpursCollectables topped The Picks this round.

Gonna Get Messi, who entered Picks only, hit second spot.

Last year's winners of this, Racing Todabogs, came third in Rd 9

Kanu Feel It stay top, and are one of four to break the 2,000 point barrier

Second and third swap places, and there are climbs for Lard Lovers XI, Chips & Gravy and Mullenvoid.

Gonna Get Messi's round though, moved them up 14 spots.

A big midweek round will see more movement.

There's pretty much a full EFL program, and all three European competitions, so somewhere in the region of 60 games being tracked.

Win three this round for SpursCollectables, gave them 25 points in The Grand Prix.

Addicks Fan took the 18 points on offer for finishing second, and Sutton WHO ??? (Chris Sutton's guesswork) got them third and a5 points.

Tumbledwyer are top with 62 points, Chips & Gravy behind them with 51.

There's 26 Rounds in the Competition, it ends with the Boxing Day Fixtures, so still loads of points to be played for.

Round 10 will see another race winner and points awarded to the best 10 Pure Points Teams (points ignoring banker wins and losses).

In the Fans League, Derby, Chelsea, Charlton and Bristol Rovers all have 17 points at the top of the table. Low scoring games this week. All recorded on the Dashboard.

The Perpetual League is a 'rolling' Premier League Table. It shows the league based on the Last 38 games played, and replaces last seasons result with this seasons result.

As the season progresses, it shows what the final table will look like if all the remaining fixtures were the same

It's on the website NOW.

I will chase you, possibly more than once.... You know I will

The First Transfer Window has closed, and I've listed the transfers that have been received before the deadline closed. They will all be processed and ready for the midweek Picks, and Round 10, onwards.

Chelsea would have finished in the Champions League places, if the season had finished this weekend. They are 2 places, 5 points and Plus 9 better off in Goal Difference, in the games played this season compared to last.

Fulham would have climbed the most, by 3 places, Palace be the worst off, by 4 places.

At the top Arsenal would be a point closer to City, but still second. Liverpool are a point worse off than last season... Perhaps the table can lie.....

There's no bonus points offered in this NewsLetter, but there will be more coming in future editions, so keep checking this out for extra Banker Points, and perhaps even points.

The Deadline for RD10 is Friday at 9PM.

That's 10PM UK time... Friday the 4th October.
